Science & Vie (Science and Life) is a Science Magazine published in France. Its Headquarters is in Paris. The Magazine started in 1913 with the Name La Science et la Vie. Science & Vie was divided in Three Sections, Science (Sciences), Technologie (Technology), Vie Pratique (Daily life). While the Science Section reported on Recent Scientific Progress, the Technology Section would report on Recent Technical Advances. Science & Vie covered Technical Advances in Industry, but also in Military Technology. In particular, it featured Articles on Explosives, Firearms, Chemical Weapons and Nuclear Weapons. The Vie Pratique Section was concerned with Technology in Daily Life. It included Articles on Photography, Personal Computers, Video Recording Equipment or Television...
